CONTROLLER JACOBS HIT POOR DIRECTORS

In His Annual Report—Says They Bought Whiskey and Charged it as Drugs—Says Feasts Were Expensive—Also Says Court House is a Botched Job.

Much matter of a sensational character is found in the first annual report of County Controller John N. Jacobs to the Montgomery County Commissioners. It breezes through out and hits heads freely.

In reference to the remodeling of the Montgomery County courthouse some years ago, which has already become too small, the Controller says:

"At a public meeting held before our last election one of the speakers stated that it cost about $300,000 to repair our courthouse. From the best information that I have been able to get, I find that it only cost $258,675.04, and, while the speaker was mistaken in the cost, I find little satisfaction in giving the correct amount, because it shows that it cost about $4 per head of our population in the county for a botched job, while a lot of men went to jail for spending $2 per head in the State in furnishing the finest State capital building in the United States."

Speaking of his impressions of the county home at Black Rock, on his first visit last May, the Controller says:

"It was my first meal there, and the food was not furnished for the inmates of the institution—only to the Directors of the Poor and their invited guests; but, of course, these delicacies were paid for out of the common fund raised by the taxpayers to feed our county poor."

"This is what I saw: a table of kinds of meat, and all the side dishes that are found on a rich man's table; in addition, we had bananas, apples, oranges, grapes, new peaches, new cherries, strawberries, watermelons all from the South, of course, besides ice cream and cakes. As if this was not enough, when we went to the office we were served with whiskey and cigars."

"I am willing to pay my share toward providing for the needs of the worthy poor of Montgomery county, but in the man who says taxes willing that a Belshazzar feast of this sort be held once a month at our courthouse, I found later that the directors purchased whiskey by the barrel—47 gallons to the household bill being endorsed as drugs."

"Judging the quality by the price paid for the 47 gallons of whiskey, I should say it was absolutely unfit to be used in the hospital. Neither do I believe that the doctor will find it necessary to put croton oil in it, as has been done in order to prevent the paid employees on the list from consuming it."

"Financially," continues the Controller, "the county is better shod than it has been for years. Its floating debt, which has been from $12,000 to $250,000 since 1905, has all been paid, and its bonded debt reduced to $530,000, and it has $109,572.92 in the treasury, which will about pay the running expenses until the 1912 taxes are received. A man who for years spends his income better than I am called a spendthrift by some and a fool by others, but that is just what Montgomery county has done for years."

BABY DIED, GIRL ARRESTED.
Miss Hinkle Weds in Court After Acquittal by Jury.

Three minutes after Lillian M. Hinkle, a former resident of White Marsh township, was acquitted in a Philadelphia court, of responsibility for the death of an adopted infant, after a trial, she became the bride of Edward B. Rose. The ceremony was performed by the Judge, Rose having been one of the witnesses for the prosecution. Last September the girl took over a baby from a woman living on 7th street, Philadelphia, and when it came ill and died she hid it in an alley. The discovery of the child's body resulted in her arrest and trial, which ended in her acquittal. At the time she had been living with Rose. While waiting for trial a child was born to her. At the conclusion of the trial Thursday her attorney announced that Rose, who was in the court room, was ready to marry the girl. Judge Barratt consented to perform the ceremony.

CHESTNUT HILL PARK IS SOLD

Will be Dismantled and Go Out of Existence—Purchasers will Divide Ground Into Lots—Price Said to be Near a Half Million Dollars.

Chestnut Hill park, popularly known as "White City," has been sold to suburbanites living in that section, who will sell the buildings and develop the twenty-five acres of land comprising the park.

The purchase price was not announced, but it is said to be in the neighborhood of $500,000. The work of dismantling the buildings will be undertaken at once. These, with other personal holdings, will be placed on sale by the park company.

Included in the sale will be every building and attraction, with the exception of the casino. It is understood that this will be utilized as a club house by a roomy for the organization composed of the men who figured in the park's purchase.

Chestnut Hill park was opened fourteen years ago. Since that time it is estimated that about $500,000 was spent in developing the park. It has been under the management of H. B. Auchy, who owns Erdensheim Terrace, adjoining the park.

Ever since it was opened, the park had been a popular place for the holding of reunions and picnics. A number of reunions have been arranged for the coming summer, and these have been transferred to Woodside Park. Also J. E. Elston, for ten years representative of "White City," will hold a similar position at Woodside, and has made arrangements to take care of the thousands of picnickers who plan for outings at Chestnut Hill will be met by the sale.

Among the events originally planned for Chestnut Hill that will be held at Woodside are: a heavy cold, Hoover family reunion, Berkey reunion, G. A. R. day and letter carriers' reunion.

Chestnut Hill park was owned by a corporation composed of H. B. Auchy, Arnold Aliman, Chester B. Albright and John Palmer Miller. The park's twenty-five acres are situated in the heart of the magnificent residential section of Chestnut Hill.

ONIAN FIRED BARN AND PERISHED

Jennie Heaton Carried out Suicide Threat—Fired the Hay in the Barn on the Property of Oliver G. Morris, Line Lexington, and Roasted in Blaze—Was Melancholy.

Temporarily insane from melancholia, it is believed, Miss Jennie Heaton, aged 27 years, went into Oliver G. Morris' barn at Line Lexington, early Sunday morning, set the hay afire and perished. Doubt as to the origin of the fire was dispelled after it was over by the finding of her charred remains in the ruins, also it was revealed that she had recently threatened to commit suicide by building a bon-fire and throwing herself in it.

John Garges, a pork butcher, discovered the fire about 5 o'clock as he was on his way to the fire church to get the edifice heated and immediately rushed in to rescue the two horses. A alarm quickly brought neighbors to the scene. Only the wagons could be saved as the fire which evidently started from a pile of hay and a wagon house, thirty tons of hay and all of the grain went up in flames and smoke. Mr. Morris has just started to thresh the grain.

It is believed that the loss will amount to about $400, partly insured in the Montgomery Mutual Insurance Company and the Line Lexington Mutual Insurance Company.

Miss Heaton, who was burned in the fire, was a daughter of Malachi Heaton, of near Eureka. For some time it is said, she had been melancholy and it is believed that while she was temporarily deranged she carried out the threat of self-destruction made a few days before.

SHERIFF SCHWARTZ'S FIRST SALE

Nineteen Pieces of Real Estate, Many in the Lower End, Disposed of at Norristown—Sheriff Was Auctioneer—Office Not a Fat One.

Sheriff Schwartz conducted and cried his first sale of real estate in Court Room No. 1 at Norristown last Wednesday afternoon. Nineteen properties were on the list, and those of interest to our readers were as follows:

House and lot at McKinley, subject to a debt of $2263.20, and owned by Michael McKenna, to Evans & Dettra, attorneys, for $1900.

Property of the Perfection Steel Company, in Cheltenham, subject to three debts of $2323.25, $1626.77 and $2563.80, sold to Lazerle & Wright, attorneys, for $5900.

Lot in Abington township, of Nicholas Corti, subject to debt of $273.88, sold to Vincent Pellari, for $500.

House and lot in Mineford, of G. Levy, subject to debt of $496, sold to H. P. Kratz, attorney, for $500.

The storm and hung suspended from Cheltenham, subject to debt of $2424.40, sold to Miller & High, attorneys, for $1500.

House and lot belonging to Howard West, in Jenkintown, subject to debt of $1432, sold to Evans & Dettra, attorneys, for $1500.

When Mr. Schwartz ran for office he was under the impression that he was to receive $1000 a year, as other county officials, but since he has learned that that is the maximum amount he may receive through fees he has decided to make every penny count, hence he acted as his own auctioneer.

PITTVILLE HOTEL UNROOFED.
Caught by the Wind, Covering to Germantown Building Was Flung Into Air.

The roof of the hotel of S. C. Rosell, at Haines street and the Lincolnton Pike, Pittville, was blown off during the storm and hung suspended from telephone and telegraph wires until late Thursday morning. The damage done to the hotel is estimated at $5000.

The wind swept under the eaves of the roof shortly after midnight and blew it away with a noise like a building thunder. Once the tin started to tear it did not stop until it had left the entire roof uncovered.

Rosell and his guests were not injured. The chimneys were demolished with the roof and the bricks littered the pike.

Part of the roof was hurled against the home of William H. Morrison, startling the family from their beds. Morrison spent several hours until daylight in the roof with a red lantern, warning motorists and farmers of the danger.

The Pittville hotel is a historic structure, having quartered a detachment of Washington's troops before the battle of Germantown.

The hotel is patronized extensively by farmers who have to use the pike into the city.

The roof was blown from the house of Mahlon Keller at Frog Hollow back of the hotel.

COLLER ACADEMY.

ter, and several nieces and nephews, the following bequests were made:—
"To the Union Library Company of Hatboro, 25 pounds towards erecting a Library room, to be paid when the said room is erected. To the Presbyterian church at Abington, 50 pounds for the purpose of supporting the gospel ministry in that place. To the Trustees of the Norristown Academy, 50 pounds for the use of that institution. All the residue and remainder of my real and personal estate, I give (after the decease of my said beloved wife) and bequeath unto Nathaniel B. Holman, and to his heirs and assigns forever, in trust to, and for the only use, intent and purpose following to wit: First, to erect a suitable building for an Academy or Seminary of Learning, (which shall be called by my name), either on my own land, or elsewhere, provided the same be within one mile of the centre of the village of Hatboro, and such place as he may think most suitable.
Secondly—After defraying the expenses of erecting the said building, to direct the income and profits of all the residue of my estate, real and personal, as aforesaid, to be appropriated to the purpose of keeping of the said building in repair and paying of the salaries of each teacher or teachers as the trustees of the said institution may from time to time employ and for no other use, intent or purpose whatsoever and in order that the said bequest herein before made, for the purpose of establishing the said academy or Seminary of Learning, may be secured and perpetuated for that purpose forever, I will and order the said academy or seminary of learning to be incorporated as soon as convenient and thereby authorize the appointment of suitable trustees from time to time, to superintend the said institution.
This building was begun in 1831 and finished in 1832 at a cost of $11,000. It was two stories high and of stone surrounded by a copula, in which hangs a bell and below it was placed a clock made by Isaiah Lukens, of Hatboro, son of Solomon Lukens, the famous clock maker.
On February 12, 1832, the building was incorporated and was the thirty-fifth chartered since the settlement of Pennsylvania.
How little Robert Loller knew when he gave to our town Loller Academy of the great good that was to result from that generous gift. Time has made many changes but the spirit of improvement is being continually manifested. A large flag flies from Washington Camp, No. 116, Patriotic sons of America, floats in the breeze over the front door. Pictures beautify the comfortable class rooms and books and magazines are in evidence.
We are greatly interested in the Academy, now spoken of more frequently as "the dear old Hatboro High" and we of the other days feel like joining with the pupils of the present day.
For old Hatboro High.
If you or your sons are ever loyal Old Hatboro High.
Your name will ever be cherished be Old Hatboro High.
We'll give a cheer for that royal Old Hatboro High.
Our Loller Academy.

NATHAN HOLT, UNION LIBRARY.
After leaving the Methodist church we notice not far above it on the opposite side of the street a neat stone building with its quiet and classic beauty. This is our library, dear to the hearts of many of us.
On December 14, 1865 there was a meeting held in the library room to celebrate the 15th anniversary of the founding of the Union Library of Hatboro, Pa. At this time the history of the library from its beginning was given in full and summaries printed which doubtless most of you have in your possession. But I must give a brief account of this library—the oldest in Montgomery county—to-day with the other beneficiaries of our town.
It seems long, long ago to think of Hatboro at a time when there was little here to mark the village but a few scattered dwellings. There were men at that time who wanted to start a library. Rev. Charles Healey, Rev. Joshua Fouts, John Lukens and Joseph Hart invited all who were interested to meet at the Crooked Billet, a public house kept by Mr. David Rees to discuss ways and means to start such a fund. On the second day of August, 1755 they conferred together as agreed upon and formed a partnership with James Jarrett, Samuel Ervin and Joseph Hart as directors. Mr. Looftborrow, secretary and Daniel Thompson, treasurer.
How well they laid the foundation and how faithfully they worked for this library is seen today by the deep interest that has been manifested, and the earnest work done by all who have followed these worthy leaders from 1755 to the present time.
The first books purchased for the library came from London and when they arrived they were found to be damaged by water on shipboard, so the directors and secretary spent one day in drying them out. There were few books at first and these were kept at different places until a room was rented for their purpose.
In 1767 an attempt was made to catalogue the books but it simply consisted of a list of the titles of the books. Elizabeth Ferguson, of Graeme Park had given a book to the library on several occasions, but in May, 1783 she gave such a donation that a carpenter was obliged to make a new set of shelves to accommodate the books. In 1787 Robert Loller became a member of the library and immediately took steps to have the company incorporated. This was accomplished on the 5th of May, 1787. The first directors under the incorporation were Jonathan Shoemaker, Seneca Lukens and John Hough.
The books were now numbered for the first time and an attempt was made to catalogue them. In 1827 Dr. Gove Mitchell succeeded in placing $1000 insurance on the books.
For ten years the life of the company was a struggle. Then came their first legacy. In 1834 Samuel Spencer left them $50. Though a small amount it meant much to the library. At this time they made a catalogue which was the first one printed. On August 26,

Heart Disease Almost Fatal to Young Girl

"My daughter, when thirteen years old, was stricken with heart trouble. She was so bad we had to place her bed near a window so she could get her breath. One doctor said, 'Poor child, she is likely to fall dead any time.' A friend told me Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy had cured her father, so I tried it and she began to improve. She took a great many bottles, but she is restored to me today, a fat, rosy checked girl. No one can imagine the confidence I have in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy." A. R. CANON, Worth, Mo.

The unbounded confidence Mr. Canon has in Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is shared by thousands of others who know its value from experience. Many heart disorders yield to treatment, if the treatment is right. If you are bothered with short breath, fainting spells, swelling of feet or ankles, pains about the heart and shooting blades, palpitation, weak and hungry spells, you should begin using Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy at once. Profit by the experience of others while you may.

Dr. Miles' Heart Remedy is sold and guaranteed by all druggists.

HATBORO'S BENEFICIARIES

1888 a special meeting was held to hear the will of Nathan Holt, who died in his 84th year, and was buried in Hoxworth Friends' graveyard. Nathan Holt was one of the oldest members of the library company and he is said to have claimed that he was indebted to the library for most of his knowledge. He bequeathed the sum of $5000 outright and made the library company his residuary legatee; this last gave them in addition $112.52. Of the bequest he directed they spend $2000 in the purchase of a suitable lot and the erection of a library house. The $2000 to be a permanent investment, the income to be applied to the purchase of books.

This was the beginning of right days for the library company. And we can readily imagine with what earnestness the work of building the library's new house was begun.

Joseph Yerkes, father of the late Judge and Dr. David Yerkes, who was a practical builder as well as a farmer, was appointed the company's agent to see that all was well done. A look at the building today shows how well he built. In 1881 the new house was ready for occupancy and gladly taken possession of by the directors. The furnishings at that time consisted of an intricate carpet on the floor, four settees, six chairs, two tables and a stove with coal to warm the room two days each week, namely, Fourth day and seventh day.

About 1866 an attempt was made to catalogue the books but the result was not very satisfactory. In 1898 the books were gone over carefully and a number of old books discarded. All were re-catalogued at a cost of $400. Since that time the old books, if desirable are being replaced, so the books on the shelves are up-to-date as nearly as possible in all classes.

The Academy and the Library have given Hatboro great literary advancement. Recently the library has given the High school the use of six of its shares, these shares being named after six friends of the library from its early

George Jamison, Joseph Barnard, Dr. Charles Hill, Col. David Marple and Harrison Yerkes. A committee of two, William K. Goettner and Hugh Morrow went to Northampton and visited the cemetery to get ideas for the design for the monument. It was decided to erect it on a plot of ground on York road on the Goettner farm, which Mr. Goettner agreed to donate. The fund for the monument was held in Goettner's woods and there were many private donations. Thursday, the 21st of December, 1891, was the day fixed upon for inaugurating the "Crooked Billet" monument, at Hatboro. A large crowd in commemoration of those who fell at the Battle of the Crooked Billet, May 1, 1778. The monument is beautiful, large and imposing and stands upon a high bank overlooking the road.

The address of the occasion was an eloquent patriotic oration by Rev. Jacob Beville.

Dr. William Darlington, of West Chester, then 36 years old, a son-in-law of General Lee, being present and called upon, addressed the audience briefly, thinking the people of the neighborhood for the patriotism they had shown by the erection of a beautiful monument, and said it was chiefly owing to the energy of the gallant Colonel of the 104th Ringgold Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, W. H. Davis and his friends, that this enterprise, which we had been called upon today to commemorate, had been commenced.

General John Davis replied that he could not permit it to go forth, that his family were the only ones prominent in this movement, that where all had acted so nobly all should share the praise; that to the ladies of Hatboro and vicinity they were principally indebted; it was to them, who had labored so assiduously and earnestly in this good work, that the managers were enabled to complete the enterprise.

In Pink and Blue

By Marian L. Watson

(Copyright, 1912, by Associated Literary Press)

"It's a wicked shame—now you can't go to prayer meetings!—you exploded, tossing the pink gown spitefully onto the bed.

Mrs. Glenside laughed softly. "Why, it's in the day's work, child," she said. "I did think I'd like to hear Lady Cane pray one more time. He's such a saint, and so old, each prayer may be the last—but Milly didn't know—and her heart is so set on wearing pink tomorrow night—"

"When she has twenty other frocks to wear," Louise interrupted rebelliously. "In fact she has everything in the world a girl can want. I have—nothing."

"Surely," Mrs. Glenside asked, with a keen glance at her helper.

Louise was so pretty it was joy to contemplate her, even without the contrast of her own rather homely Milly Dunham. Milly, indeed, had everything but beauty and charm—the beauty and charm that were denied to Louise.

The little sewing girl, and tried hard to be kind to her, but Louise made it difficult—she was so proud, so resentful of nature's gifts, since truth must be spoken, so envious.

"I wonder what it is like—to be fine from top to toe—and feel it all yours," she said at last, looking up from the machine.

She sat sewing ruffles upon a silk frock—a sort of fair under-robe for the coming gown. Milly, the gown's owner, had suddenly decided to wear a finer slip. The ruffles were scarce, hardly more than a veiling for the shimmering silk.

Louise admitted to herself spitefully that she would add something to the lady pink chiffon. The slip had to be made at once—Milly was coming in the morning to try it on and have the frocks adjusted to the lines of it.

"And she'll look like a pump—'all you fit so beautifully," Louise said spitefully as she laid down the slip.

All the rest was hand-work—Mrs. Glenside would trust that to nobody but herself. Otherwise, Louise, a moment of exaltation, would have volunteered to do the hand-work, and so give time from prayer meeting.

She was a generous creature, if she did have a temper. Though she had regular hours, she never complained of working beyond them. Indeed, Mrs. Glenside, who had been so kind to put up her thimble and go out for a bit of air.

"It is a pity, Milly would be right nice to her—she didn't allow her dress to show," Mrs. Glenside admitted. "But the poor thing doesn't know that. Besides, her mother lives for clothes. Every crowd you know thinks its own white. So I reckon Milly looks pretty and stylish to Mrs. Dunham. The judge is a fond father, but I can't imagine he is mightily disappointed not to have his own child a beauty."

"He ought to adopt me," Louise said recklessly.

Mrs. Glenside pursed her lips, but murmured indulgently: "Vain thing!" and went on sewing.

She was sympathetic enough—had not she herself been poor and pretty, and a state made of her?—but she thought of her mother's rightfulness. But she was not going to encourage wild notions in Louise—her orphan with no nearer counselor, than the good dreamer.

"Think of a masked party! How I'd love to see it!" Louise muttered after she had been looking at the fading light. It was just as usual. Mrs. Glenside looked over. "Do you mind running over to the Canby's for some new-laid eggs?" she asked. "I can telephone for you if you want. There may be nobody to fetch them."

"I'll fetch them—gladly," Louise said, darting away.

She should not stop to change her blue chambergown working frock, nor to snatch a bit. In the briefest space she was at the Canby house; a little later she ran down through the side gate with a bag of eggs clutched in both hands. Dark was falling; more over she was dreaming when she should have been looking. Between the side gate and the house, she ran into a passer-by, a tall young fellow, immaculate in white flannels, with a gayly banded bow tie, who was looking at her with a steady forward at a great rate, and what, with his own impetuous and Louise's quick motion, the eggs had no chance to be saved.

The squashed egg broke—white and yolk overflowed him. To save Louise from falling he had caught her close, and her blue gown was nearly as much a sight as his white attire.

Notwithstanding, both of them laughed long and heartily. "I never dreamed an egg had such possibilities," the stranger said, checking himself after a little.

Louise, "Between us, we owe Mrs. Glenside just a dozen. But I'll pay the debt. You had better run away to home."

"I'm thinking—if only we had milk and a baker we might make custard pie," the young fellow bantered.

"I'll be right back," Louise said, turning to go.

at the masquerade? Do tell me your name!"

"Sewing girls don't go to masquerades—nor private ones," Louise said bitterly.

Young Gray caught her arm. "I beg your pardon—I mean no impertinence—but would you like to be there?"

"Of course not. I'm nineteen, and love dancing better than my soul. I'm not had, but I'm not—besides I really have got a frock to wear. But I shall never wear it—because I won't have a chance— Louise began, her voicelessly, to smile.

Kenneth Gray took both her hands. "You shall have the chance," he said. "I will see to it. Be ready at 9 o'clock. I'll make it my business to find out where you are—and whom I shall ask for."

You don't mean a word of that—but I'm game for anything," Louise cried, breaking from his grasp. "I'm Louise Ware, and I live with Mrs. Glenside." This aloud—to herself she added: "You deserve something—you are the fellow Milly Dunham is so deeply in love with. You may marry—her money—but for this one night, you shall know the difference."

At eleven next night she stood breathing quickly, and leaning upon Gray's arm rather heavily, what time, through her mask, she surveyed the vivid scene. They had just finished a rapid two-step—she danced like a little devil, her soul all in her tripping feet, her shining eyes. There would be an hour more of it—she meant not to miss a number. Unmeaning came with the stroke of twelve—she would stand away just before it—Kenneth should not affront with her, openly, his world. He had been the prince of gallants, dancing and true.

Milly had on the pink frock, but Louise no longer envied her. Her own white cape, fashioned from an ancestral shawl, and rich with velvet embroidery, held its own with the finest.

She had been masked when he came for her—she would go away, letting him have no more than a glimpse of her face as she said good-by at the cab door. She meant he should leave her there, and go back to finish the evening's pleasure.

"You are giving me something to remember always," she said to him in the little hall of the music between the two rooms.

"I am giving you my whole heart," Kenneth whispered. The music struck up—they hurried to the doorway to find before they had made the floor's round there came a wild cry of fire! The ballroom was on the third floor, and the stairs to it, through broad, were neither straight nor frequent.

Chaos followed the cry. Kenneth caught Louise tight in his arms and ran to the west window. The stairs were already choked. Still holding her, he clambered out on a narrow ledge stone coping, shutting the sash behind him. There was a chance of rescue, also a chance of salvation. A big oak stood a little way off, the branches of it almost touching the ledge.

Kenneth measured the distance; could he leap it safely, carrying his precious burden? As he hesitated the window was raised—Milly Dunham thrust through it, crying dryly: "Kenneth! Save me! I love you! Love you so!"

It was Louise who drew her out to them on the ledge that had barely room for two.

"Jump!" she cried to Kenneth, nodding toward the tree.

As he obeyed, she steadied herself, drew Milly past her flattened self, crying in a half whisper: "Catch!" At the same time, she swung the girl within reach of his arms. Milly was half fainting—Kenneth could not let go of her. Yet he called "Come!" and Louise laughed herself toward him.

He braced himself, and tried to catch her with his free arm, but missed her. Fluttering by an inch—she shut his eyes, his heart stopping as he heard her brush through the oaken twigs. A shout made him open them—it was not the shout of horror. Looking down he saw Louise lying spent but safe, in a big robe, snatched from a waiting carriage, and held by four good men and true.

Mrs. Dunham insisted upon giving Louise not only a trousseau but a dowry. As Milly, happy in a new sweetheart, wore blue, not pink, as bridesmaid, and looked almost pretty.

Having lent his horse tied in a shed at Tyler's store, Doylestown, when Frank Ulmer returned the animal was gone, but was later found in a wire fence, with its foot injured.

Having fallen from the scaffolding of Frank L. Worthington's new house, Doylestown, Kirk Carver is confined to his bed, and it is feared his collarbone is fractured.

As Washington's Birthday anniversary is a bank holiday, the directors of the Hatboro National Bank met this week on Wednesday instead of Thursday.

The C. E. Social of the Baptist church was entertained by Miss Sadie Meredith last Wednesday evening, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Morris, on Lehman avenue.

George Wright, in the employ of F. H. McVaugh, having developed typhoid fever, was on Monday last taken to St. Luke's Hospital, Philadelphia, for treatment. He was taken down in an automobile.

Several broken wash paves from which water was flowing have been repaired this week by the Water company. Superintendent Craven says the upheaval of frost breaks the casting connection.

A social and entertainment will be given in the lecture room of the Baptist church, by the Parlier Lights Society this evening (Friday). A silver made showed a production of 156 gallons of water per minute. The new well is about 30 feet from the old one but does not affect its water supply.

The Ashtons will be remembered by our older residents.

WHAT HATBORO NEEDS

Words of Wisdom From Wilson Welsh

As an old resident of Hatboro and vicinity for nearly twenty years I am naturally interested in the efforts being made by the business men's organization to protect and advance its interests. It is but the simple truth to say that as a business center Hatboro has made very little progress during the past twenty years. And the last census showed but a small increase in its population. The construction of railway lines and railroads to and through the small towns contiguous to Hatboro has diverted business that formerly centered there. Then too so far as any manufacturing business is concerned, or means of employment for the people, they have been no progress, but an actual decline. The young men or women who reside there must seek employment elsewhere, which means owing to high railroad fares or long trolley rides, removal nearer to the place of employment. Hatboro has lost many families from these causes to my knowledge.

On the other hand Hatboro has advantages. Its schools, churches and library are of the best, and its banking facilities, all that could be desired.

There are many excellent locations for any manufacturing business requiring railroad facilities or an abundance of pure water. It is what is termed a "Philadelphia" rate point, which means that the rates East or West are the same as to or from Philadelphia. It will be remembered that a number of years ago an organization was formed similar to the one now existing. The writer was its secretary. We advertised and corresponded with quite a number of individuals and firms, that manifested a disposition to locate. Some of them were purely speculative, others were of a most substantial character, and two of them at least secured success in their ventures and have been most successful. The cause of our failure to secure any of the business offered was not always due to those who largely controlled its financial interests. As a rule something must be contributed in the way of land, freedom from taxes for a term of years, or an investment in its securities.

Our advertisement and correspondence at Ambler, and other points on the North Penna. R. R. in nearly all these cases resulted in no inducement to those who established the industries. Consider what would follow if a manufacturing plant was located in the immediate vicinity of Hatboro employing 250 or 500 hands, or even 100. It would enhance the value of every house and lot in the neighborhood, as well as add to the value of the farms, for they would value a home market. Some will object that it might bring an undesirable addition to the population, this is not always true, except in certain kinds of industries. One thing is certain, Hatboro is not adding to its population the class of people who enjoy fixed incomes, so that if it is to grow it must be from the channels indicated. I certainly hope the present business men's association will solve some of the problems pressing for a solution, and in such a way as will add to its attractions as a home and business center.

Truly Yours,

WILSON WELSH.

YOU PAY

We pay for everything we receive—may all things can be attained if we but pay the price. One of the very few EMANCIPATED MEN in America bought redemption from the bondage of selfish ambition at a terrible price.

In this matter of health just a few plain rules suffice, and these rules fairly followed, soon grow into a personal habit, and the habit a pleasure. Folks who get fussy about their digestion and assume a personal charge of nerves, have "nerves" and are apt to have no digestion.

"I have a pain in my side," said the woman to the busy doctor "Forget it" was the curt advice. Get the Health Habit, and forget it, is excellent advice. It is the same with your soul as it is with your body. The man who is always stewing about his soul has a very small and insignificant one.

You don't have to trouble about your soul's salvation. Everything in the universe worth saving will be saved. Don't worry.

That advice of the busy doctor should be used by the preacher, and when the black-bird breed comes around fussing about their souls, the advice should be "Forget it!"

If you take Hood's Sarsaparilla and receive as much benefit from it as did Mr. Benjamin C. Rose of Saunderson, R. I. He says, "My sickness and bad feelings from dyspepsia and nervous prostration extended over seven years. Physicians, medicines and treatments gave practically the same result,—no help, but Hood's Sarsaparilla did the work for me and did it well. Friends said I did not seem to be the same man. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a great spring medicine, a fine stomach and nerve tonic."

AUTO OWNER HAS A CHANCE

Court Says Police Must Prove He Was Driving Car That Violates Law.

E. B. Richardson, of Philadelphia, was recently arrested charged with violating the speed laws, a policeman claiming to have seen a car bearing Mr. Richardson's license tag going along the street at the rate of 25 miles an hour.

Mr. Richardson was reported to Magistrate Beaton, who notified Mr. Richardson to come to his office and pay a fine and cost.

Mr. Richardson went to the Magistrate's office with proof that his car was not out of the city charged, Magistrate Beaton, notwithstanding the fact that Mr. Richardson, a reputable citizen, not only took oath himself that his car was not out of the garage but offered ample proof of the fact, ordered the fine to be paid and cost.

Mr. Richardson determined to fight the case and refused to pay the fine whereupon he was held in $500 bail for court.

The case came up before Judge Stanke, in Philadelphia, who decided that there was no case against Mr. Richardson and awarded the very important point to motorists that where a person is arrested or summoned to pay a fine for violating the speed laws that he cannot be fined or imprisoned merely on the testimony of the officer of the law that the car seen violating the law bore the license number of the accused but it must be proven that the owner was then and there operating the said car.

GRAVE OF FAMOUS INDIAN

Tammany Head of Delaware Tribe Buried in Bucks.

From William J. Heller, of Easton, the Bucks County Historical Society has received information confirming an old Bucks county tradition that Tammany, the famous Indian chief of the Eighteenth century, died in that county in 1770 and was buried at Prospect Hill. Mr. Heller received inquiries upon the subject among the remains of the Delaware Indians still remaining in Oklahoma, and found that the date and place of the death of the great chieftain of the tribe, according to their annals, coincides with the Bucks county tradition. Mr. Heller informed the Indians that the Bucks County Historical Society contemplates erecting a monument at the site of Tammany's grave, and this aroused deep interest among the Delaware men, some of them proposing to send a large delegation from the western tribes to attend the dedication of the memorial. "If the society puts up the memorial," said Mr. Heller, "at least a thousand Indians, all men of importance, will attend the dedication. But if the society delays action, the Indians will themselves erect a monument themselves and make the dedication a national affair."

TO KEEP LICE FROM POULTRY

One of Most Difficult Problems That Confronts Chicken Fancier—Proper Procedure.

(By R. G. WEATHERSTONE)
 One of the most difficult problems which the poultry keeper has to meet is that of keeping his poultry houses and stock reasonably free from lice, mites and other external parasites.

In keeping a poultry plant free from lice there are two points of attack: One, the birds themselves; the other, the houses, nest boxes, roosting boards, etc.

In using any kind of lice powder on the birds themselves, it should always be remembered that a single application of powder is not sufficient. When there are lice present on a bird there are always unhatched eggs of lice ("nits") present, too. The proper procedure is to follow up a first application of powder with a second at an interval of four days to a week. If the birds are badly infested at the beginning it may be necessary to make still a third application. To clean the cracks and crevices of the woodwork of houses and nests of lice and vermin a liquid spray or paint is probably the most desirable form of application.

A splendid lice powder may be made at a cost of only a few cents a pound in the following way: Take three parts of gasoline and one part of crude carbolic acid; mix these together and add gradually with stirring, enough plaster of Paris to take up all the moisture. The liquid and the dry plaster should be thoroughly mixed and stirred so that the liquid will be uniformly distributed through the mass of plaster. When enough plaster has been added the resulting mixture should be a dry, pinkish brown powder having a fairly strong carbolic odor and a rather less pronounced gasoline odor.

Do not use more plaster in mixing than is necessary to blot up the liquid. This powder is to be worked into the feathers of the birds affected with vermin. The bulk of the application should be in the fluff around the vent and on the ventral side of the body and in the fluff under the wings. Its efficiency, which is greater than that of any other lice powder known to the writer, can be very easily demonstrated by anyone to his own satisfaction. Take a bird that is covered with lice and apply the powder in the manner just described. After a lapse of about a minute, shake the bird, loosening its feathers with the fingers at the same time, over a clean piece of paper. Dead and dying lice will drop on the paper in great numbers. Anyone who will try this experiment will have no further doubt of the wonderful efficiency and value of this powder.

For a spray or paint to be applied to roosting boards, nest boxes or walls and floor of the hen houses the following preparation is used:—3 parts of kerosene and 1 part crude carbolic acid. This is stirred up when used and may be applied with any of the hand spray pumps or with a brush.

In both of these formulae it is highly important that crude carbolic acid be used instead of the purified product. Be sure and insist to the druggist on getting crude carbolic acid. It is a dark brown, dirty looking liquid, and its value depends on the fact that it contains tar oil and tar bases in addition to the pure phenol (carbolic acid).

Guinea in Winter.
 The guinea fowl is a native of warm countries and has a natural fear of snow, so in the north when guinea fow are caught out in a snowstorm there is a good chance for trouble if we undertake to force them to walk through snow to the poultry house.

The guinea will take to flight rather than wade in snow and rather than light on the ground when covered with snow they will light in trees, or if there are no trees they will light on the tops of buildings.

It saves trouble to house the guinea fow as soon as it is apparent that snow will cover the ground and keep them housed until the storm is past.

TIMELY TOPICS OF PLANTS AND PESTS DISCUSSED WEEKLY

By H. A. Surface, State Zoologist of Pa.
 FOR TREE SPRAYING

The Best Lime and Sulfur Formula.

Prof. H. A. Surface, State Zoologist, Harrisburg, is often asked to explain the difference between the old formula of 17-25-50, in preparing a lime and sulfur solution for spraying fruit trees, and the concentrated method of using one pound of lime and two pounds of sulfur to each gallon of water.

A correspondent in the city of Reading wrote that he had good results with the old formula, except that when the solution is left standing over night there is difficulty in straining it. Professor Surface, in replying to the letter, gave the following advice:

"Replying to your letter concerning making the lime-sulfur solution, I beg to say that the correct formula calls for two pounds of ground or powdered sulfur of any kind, and one pound of rood, fresh lime, in one gallon of water, boiled for one hour. If you let it settle you do not need to strain it as there is no sediment in the clear liquid. If you do not take the time to let it settle, it should be strained."

The advantage of this over the 17-25-50 solution is that it is storable without crystallization. You can make it and keep it as many years as you want it. Also, there is nowhere near as much sediment to contend with. This formula gets rid of nearly all of the sediment, especially if you will let it settle, and remove the liquid, and store this clear, red liquid only, and this does not crystallize.

It is much better to use some lime or some of the sediment in the material at the time you desire to do the spraying, in order that it will act as a marker, and you can see where it was applied, as you suggest. It is a good plan to have at hand a barrel in which you can keep the sediment separate, and stir and strain it, and add it to the tank of liquid when you are ready to spray, or stir in a few pounds of lime to the spray liquid, when you are ready to use it. If you do not use something of the kind as a marker, you must simply do as good a job of spraying as possible when the wind is blowing slightly, being sure to cover all the one side of the tree at one time. Then when the wind changes, direct the spray liquid to the other side, and spray the opposite side thoroughly."

6000-EGG ELECTRIC INCUBATOR

One of the largest electric incubators in use anywhere in the world was built for a poultry raiser in New Orleans. It is 40 feet long by 5 feet wide, and contains 40 compartments, each having a capacity of 150 eggs. Each compartment can be separately controlled, so that any one, or all of the compartments, can be operated according to the number of eggs to be hatched. The controlling thermostats used do not heat the incubator, but the heater circuit, but introduce the comparatively high resistance of a small electric lamp when open, thus avoiding sparking at the contacts. The March Popular Mechanics Magazine contains a picture of the incubator.

Please note the advertisement of James L. Rhymer, who is one of the best known dealers in seed potatoes in Philadelphia. Mr. Rhymer, whose headquarters are at Hatboro, Pa., Second and Master, predicts a great scarcity in good stock for the coming spring market, and unless people purchase of well-known dealers, they in all probabilities will get inferior grades. Mr. Rhymer has made a reputation for fair dealing and the handling of good stock, and will handle upwards of 25,000 bushels this spring.
